Part A Very Short Answer Questions

Answer any 10 questions Each question carries 2 marks

1. Define modern marketing? [U] / [CO1]

Modern marketing focuses on creating value for customers by understanding their needs and building long-term relationships. It uses technology, data, and customer insights to deliver personalised experiences. It moves beyond selling products to satisfying customer expectations.

2. State any two demographic factors. [U] / [CO2]

These factors help marketers identify customer groups and tailor products accordingly.

Age, Gender, Income, Education level, Occupation, Family size and marital status, Religion and ethnicity….

3. Use cart recovery emails to improve sales. [A] / [CO4]

Cart recovery emails remind customers about items left in their online shopping cart. They encourage purchase completion by offering gentle prompts or incentives like discounts. This increases conversions and reduces abandoned carts.

4. Evaluate the effectiveness of product photos in marketing. [E] / [CO3]

High-quality product photos attract customer attention and build trust by showing details clearly. They influence purchase decisions by reducing uncertainty about the product. Good visuals increase engagement and boost sales.

5. Analyze how satisfaction leads to brand loyalty. [An] / [CO1]

When customers feel satisfied, they develop trust and a positive perception toward the brand. This reduces the likelihood of switching to competitors. Over time, repeat purchases turn into strong brand loyalty.

6. Define customer journey mapping. [U] / [CO2]

Customer journey mapping is the process of visualising every step a customer takes from awareness to purchase and beyond. It helps businesses understand customer needs, pain points, and interactions. This enables better service design and improved customer experience.

7. Explain the speciality of Personas in marketing. [U] / [CO2]

Personas are fictional profiles representing different types of customers. They help marketers understand customer motivations, preferences, and behaviours. This leads to more targeted and effective marketing strategies.

8. Respond to a negative comment on Facebook professionally. [A] / [CO4]

A professional response acknowledges the issue politely and offers help:

“Thank you for bringing this to our attention. We’re sorry for your experience and would love to resolve it. Please share your details via message so we can assist you quickly.”

9. List out the types of e-Commerce. [U] / [CO3]
The main types of e-commerce are B2B (Business-to-Business), B2C (Business-to-Consumer), C2C (Consumer-to-Consumer), and C2B (Consumer-to-Business). Emerging types include B2G and G2C.

10. State the role of social media in marketing. [U] / [CO4]
Social media helps businesses reach large audiences quickly and engage customers through interactive content. It supports brand awareness, customer feedback, and targeted advertising. It also enhances customer relationships and drives sales.

11. Define mobile marketing. [U] / [CO4]
Mobile marketing involves promoting products and services through mobile devices like smartphones and tablets. It uses SMS, apps, mobile ads, and location-based services to reach customers instantly. It enables personalised and real-time communication.

12. Distinguish between intent-based and behaviour-based segmentation. [An] / [CO2]
Intent-based segmentation groups customers based on what they plan or intend to buy in the future. Behaviour-based segmentation classifies customers based on past actions such as purchases, browsing patterns, or usage frequency. Both help marketers target customers more effectively.

Part B Short Answer Questions
Answer any 6 questions. Each question carries 5 marks
13. Design a push notification for a sale event. [A] / [CO4]
A good push notification for a sale event should be short, urgent, and exciting to capture attention. For example: “Mega Sale Alert! Flat 50% OFF on your favourites—Today Only! Tap to shop before it’s gone!” The message shall use strong action words and emojis to make it engaging. It communicates the benefit clearly and highlights urgency. Such notifications increase click-through rates. They help bring inactive customers back to the app and boost conversions.
[Value Liberally considering alternative but relevant examples]

14. Analyse why ethical marketing practices are important in today's marketing scenario. [An] / [CO3]
Ethical marketing practices build trust and credibility among customers, which is essential in a competitive digital market. Consumers today are more aware and demand transparency in communication. Ethical behaviour protects brands from legal issues and reputation damage. It ensures long-term customer relationships based on honesty and fairness. Ethical marketing also differentiates a brand from competitors who may use misleading tactics. Ultimately, it contributes to sustainable business growth.

15. Explain the significance of display ads in marketing. [U] / [CO3]
Display ads help businesses gain visibility by appearing on websites, apps, and social platforms. They use visuals, animations, and short messages to attract customer attention. Display ads support brand awareness even if users do not click immediately. They target audiences based on interests, behaviour, or demographics. Retargeting through display ads reminds users of products they viewed earlier. This results in higher engagement and improved conversions.

16. Break down the components of a microenvironment and explain how each affects decision-making. [An] / [CO1]
The microenvironment consists of customers, competitors, suppliers, intermediaries, and the company itself. Customers influence decisions because their preferences determine product features and pricing. Competitors push the company to innovate and adopt better strategies. Suppliers affect production quality, cost, and availability of materials. Intermediaries like distributors and retailers influence how products reach customers. The company's internal environment—employees, departments, and culture—shapes marketing decisions and overall performance.

17. State the disadvantages of marketing. [U] / [CO1]
Marketing can be expensive, especially with high costs for advertising and promotion. It may increase product prices as companies pass promotional costs onto consumers. Sometimes marketing can create misleading impressions if not done ethically. It may promote unnecessary consumption and encourage materialism. Marketing activities also raise environmental concerns by increasing packaging and waste. Businesses may face negative publicity if campaigns fail or offend customers.

18. Evaluate the mobile marketing strategies available. [E] / [CO4]
Mobile marketing strategies include SMS marketing, app-based marketing, push notifications, mobile ads, and location-based promotions. SMS marketing is effective for quick updates but can feel intrusive. App-based marketing offers personalised experiences but requires users to install the app. Push notifications drive engagement but must be used carefully to avoid irritation. Mobile ads reach a wide audience but depend on user attention. Overall, combining strategies ensures better reach and higher conversion rates.

19. Identify the reasons modern marketing is considered more efficient than traditional marketing. [E] / [CO1]
Modern marketing uses digital tools that allow precise targeting of customers based on data. It offers real-time analytics to measure performance instantly, unlike traditional methods. Costs are lower because digital campaigns do not require physical materials. Customer engagement is higher through social media, email, and mobile platforms. Personalised marketing improves customer satisfaction and response rates. Overall, modern marketing provides better reach, speed, and performance tracking.

20. Explain customer journey mapping and its importance. [U] / [CO2]
Customer journey mapping is a visual representation of all the interactions a customer has with a brand. It includes stages like awareness, consideration, purchase, and post-purchase. The map helps identify customer needs and expectations at each stage. It also highlights pain points or gaps in service delivery. Businesses use this insight to improve the overall customer experience. This leads to better satisfaction, loyalty, and long-term engagement.

21. Compare the effectiveness of email campaigns. [An] / [CO4]
Email campaigns are effective because they allow direct communication with customers at a low cost. They offer personalisation through tailored content based on customer behaviour. Compared to social media posts, emails provide deeper engagement and higher conversion rates. Email performance can be tracked using open rates, click-through rates, and conversions. Automated email sequences nurture customer relationships effectively. Overall, email campaigns remain one of the most reliable digital marketing tools.

22. Touchpoints influence customers in perceiving a brand's value, reliability, and emotional resonance. Validate. [E] / [CO3]
Touchpoints are moments when customers interact with a brand, such as websites, ads, customer service, packaging, and social media. Each touchpoint shapes the customer's impression of the brand's value and quality. Positive interactions build trust and signal reliability. Emotional touchpoints, like friendly support or inspiring content, strengthen emotional bonds. Inconsistent or negative touchpoints can harm the brand image. Therefore, managing touchpoints effectively is crucial for delivering a strong and consistent brand experience.
