(1 x 5 = 5)

Part B

6. Connects with others - helps to find friends outside immediate geographies - gives information about mental health and other sources. [CO1]
7. Vashti took a cab - lift- air ship service - vestibule; impact - social anxiety due to isolated living - inability to look direct at things - lack of interest in natural scene- averse to physical touch. [CO2]
8. Interest in the app surged but took the mystery away - people started finding ways to circumvent rule - started selling multi-level marketing schemes - ads-audio spams - eventually people started ignoring its messages. [CO3]
9. Vashti contrasted with Kuno – Vashti - compliant and worships the machine-prays to the Book - contently lives underground - hates travelling; Kuno- rebels against the Machine - dissatisfied with life underground - seeks adventure - appreciates natural world. [CO2]
10. People who have known nothing their entire lives but fully digitized versions of what were originally analog activities. [CO1]
11. Eliminate miseries of human slavery and take over laborious and mundane tasks - Capek’s robots - devised as artificial slaves - “the Perfect Servant”- Hugo, the Robot - proud to serve the master - knows how to make windows shine, arrange flowers, set the table. [CO3]
12. Society got enchanted by new technology and its practical uses- initially treated like toys- became too involved later- got trapped in a social behavioral pattern of constant communication (music, ads, propaganda) -perpetually “in touch”--rationalized the nerves as a sign of modern age-Brock points to human need for solitude and calm. [CO2]

13. Through Juno-a new app for better living- Juno uses the app to keep her phone away- ironically. [CO3]
14. People entrust Google’s search algorithm with finding relevant and trustworthy information- increased reliance on Google for answers, means diminished ability to locate information independently- “truth” is defined by top results on Google- People ask Google to guide them around too. [CO2]

(5 x 6 = 30)

Part C

15. Vashti - content to spent life in her underground room- listening to music, lectures, calling friends- compliant and worshipful towards the Machine-finds comfort in praying to the Book- a conformist. Kuno - opposite of Vashti- rebels against the Machine- not content spending life in underground room- has a taste for adventure, nature- transgresses established boundaries- determined to “find his way out” to the Earth’s surface rather requesting exit permit through proper channels- critical of the society worshipful of the Machine- expresses deep faith in humanity – longs to see Vashti outside mediation of the Machine. [CO2]
16. Violent and destructive-rebels against the tyranny of noise and interruption- destroys gadgets- poured a paper cup of water into intercommunications system- stamped on wrist radio on sidewalk- spooned ice cream into car radio transmitter- shoved telephone down the Insinkerator- shot the televisor- not mindless vandalism but a desperate quest for silence and freedom. [CO2]
17. Deals with a predicament of elderly couple (E K Kamalakshan Nair and Aruna) compelled by their son Niteesh living abroad to transition into a world of technology and computers- theme of identity explored through the concept of “address” – earlier related to one’s home, family, class, community, and ancestry- challenged by the new “fictitious” name and address- “unique” email address- puzzled by son creating a new address for father-use of shortened names in professional spaces- Nit for Niteesh- Niteesh and other young characters in contrast to the elderly couple represent the cyber generation- not willing to be tied down- even while the couple rejoice in the end with new email id and password- there is a sense of fear and foreboding with the “new” identity. [CO3]
