PART A

1. Protection of individual rights and freedom/ rule of law/constitutional government.

2. Marxist theory.

3. The Social Contract.

4. Kevin B. Anderson

5. Ancient Greece/Germany.

6. Patriotism is love for one's country/ chauvinism is aggressive or narrow nationalism.

7. Benedict Anderson.

8. Political dimension.

9. It weakens national sovereignty/state autonomy.

10. Political ideology advocating free markets and limited government intervention/social conservatism/extreme nationalism.

PART B

11. In developed societies, nationalism often serves symbolic unity- in transitional societies it drives modernization and identity formation amid social, economic, and political transformations following colonialism or authoritarian rule.

12. Locke viewed the constitutional state as one based on consent- limited government- and separation of powers-ensuring protection of natural rights—life, liberty, and property—through rule of law and accountable authority.

13. Internal self-determination concerns a group's autonomy within an existing state- external self-determination refers to the right to form an independent state or secede from an existing political entity.

14. "Imagined community" means members of a nation feel connected despite never meeting each other-nationalism creates this shared identity through media, symbols, and collective imagination-explained by Benedict Anderson.

15. Primordialism is criticized as ahistorical-it treats nations and ethnic identities as natural and timeless-ignoring their social construction and historical evolution through political, economic, and cultural processes.

16. Ethnic nationalism defines belonging through shared ancestry, culture, and language rather than citizenship- example- German nationalism in the 19th century emphasized ethnic unity over territorial boundaries or civic participation.

17. Nation-building focuses on creating a shared national identity among citizens- state-building emphasizes establishing effective political institutions and administrative structures - ensure governance and public service delivery.

18. Transnationalism facilitates diasporic politics by enabling migrants to maintain political, cultural, and economic ties with their homelands- influencing policy and identity across borders through networks, technology, and global activism.

19. Regional solidarity in climate agreements involves cooperation among neighbouring countries to address shared environmental challenges- joint carbon reduction - disaster management- promoting collective resilience and sustainable development.

20. Globalisation endangers local languages by promoting dominant global tongues through media, technology, and education- leading to cultural homogenization - the erosion of minority linguistic traditions and local cultural identities.

PART C

22. Technology redefines state sovereignty by transforming how power, authority, and control are exercised within and beyond national borders- eroding traditional state control over borders, information, and economies-digital communication, cyber warfare, and global data networks create shared and contested domains of authority-control over data storage and transfer raises questions about who owns and governs digital information that crosses borders- forcing states to negotiate sovereignty within transnational digital spaces and global governance frameworks.

22. Ethno-symbolists view Zionism as rooted in enduring Jewish myths, symbols, and collective memory- emphasizing cultural continuity- modernists interpret it as a product of modernization and political mobilization responding to European nationalism and anti-Semitism-these perspectives highlight cultural depth and modern political construction in Zionist identity formation.

23. Major forms of nationalism include civic or secular nationalism- emphasizing shared political values and citizenship- ethnic nationalism, based on common ancestry and culture-cultural nationalism- focused on heritage preservation- religious nationalism- integrating faith with nationhood- economic nationalism- prioritizing domestic economic interests over global integration and competition.

24.U.S practices selective protectionism through tariffs and subsidies to safeguard key industries-EU employs agricultural and environmental protectionism to defend regional markets-China uses state-led protectionism via industrial policy, technology transfer controls - export restrictions to strengthen domestic industries and maintain economic sovereignty in global trade.
