Part B: Short Essay

16	Explain oral communication.	Oral communication is the exchange of information through spoken words. It includes conversations, meetings, presentations, speeches, and telephone calls. It allows immediate feedback and clarification, making it an effective method of communication. Features include quick interaction, personal contact, and emotional expression. Effective oral communication requires clear speech, confidence, proper tone, and active listening.
17	Explain formal letters.	Formal letters are official written communications used in business or professional contexts. They follow a standard format including sender's address, date, receiver's address, subject, salutation, body, closing, and signature. They are used for purposes such as job applications, complaints, enquiries, and official requests. Formal letters maintain a polite tone, clarity, and professionalism.
18	Discuss importance of preparation.	Preparation is essential for effective communication and presentations. It helps organize ideas clearly, improves confidence, reduces anxiety, and ensures accuracy of information. Proper preparation allows the speaker to understand the audience, structure the message logically, and use supporting examples. It also helps manage time effectively and improves overall impact.
19	Explain skills required for GD (Group Discussion).	Important skills for group discussion include communication skills, listening skills, analytical thinking, leadership, teamwork, and confidence. Participants should express ideas clearly, respect others' opinions, stay relevant to the topic, and contribute meaningful points. Good body language and logical reasoning also help in performing well in GD.
20	Discuss mind mapping.	Mind mapping is a visual technique used to organize ideas and information around a central topic. It uses diagrams with branches representing related ideas. This technique helps improve creativity, memory, and understanding of complex topics. Mind maps are commonly used in brainstorming, note-taking, planning, and problem solving.
21	Discuss role of feedback.	Feedback plays a vital role in effective communication. It helps the sender know whether the message has been understood correctly. Feedback improves communication accuracy, promotes interaction, and helps correct misunderstandings. It also strengthens relationships and helps in decision making and performance improvement.

Part C: Essays

22	Analyze importance of mass communication.	Mass communication refers to the process of transmitting information to a large audience through media such as television, radio, newspapers, and the internet. It plays a crucial role in spreading information, education, and entertainment to society. Mass communication helps in shaping public opinion, promoting awareness about social issues, and supporting democratic processes. It also assists businesses in advertising and marketing their products. In modern society, mass communication connects people globally and supports cultural exchange and knowledge dissemination.
23	Discuss the role of rhythm in effective speech.	Rhythm in speech refers to the pattern of stressed and unstressed sounds that create flow and clarity in speaking. A good rhythm helps maintain audience interest and improves the effectiveness of communication. It involves proper pacing, pauses, emphasis, and variation in tone. Rhythm makes speech more engaging, easier to understand, and memorable. Effective speakers use rhythm to highlight key points and maintain audience attention.
24	Explain public speaking and its importance.	Public speaking is the act of addressing an audience to convey ideas, information, or opinions. It is an important communication skill used in education, business, leadership, and social settings. Public speaking helps individuals influence people, share knowledge, and express ideas confidently. Its importance lies in developing leadership qualities, improving communication skills, and building self-confidence. Effective public speaking requires good preparation, clear structure, audience awareness, and confident delivery.
